Présentation de l'éditeur

Gods and goddesses; mighty heroes and indomitable women; dragons, serpents and cosmic wolves; the great World-Tree, inhabited by magical and monstrous creatures ... The Norse myths speak to us as vibrantly today as when they were told in Viking halls centuries ago. Originating in ancient Scandinavia and Iceland, they were recorded in sagas and poems, and in the (less approving) accounts of medieval Christian writers. Archaeology also gives us tantalizing depictions of Viking ships, eight-legged horses, and titanic battles on rune-stones, metalwork and carvings. Through Carolyne Larrington's vivid new translations from the Old Norse we meet the inhabitants of this rich mythological cosmos face to face. Biographie de l'auteur Carolyne Larrington is a supernumerary fellow in medieval English at St John's College, University of Oxford, and the author, most recently, of "King Arthur's Enchantresses".
